SEATTLE – June 22, 2020 – The Ensemble Practice, the premier business consulting firm for the financial advisory industry, announced today that it is creating two annual scholarships for its leadership training program, the G2 Leadership Institute. “There are so many talented people from underrepresented groups who could be contributing to the future of the advisory industry and who deserve the opportunity to take the stage and become leaders in their firms,” said Philip Palaveev, CEO of The Ensemble Practice. “By broadening access to our G2 Leadership Institute, with its comprehensive curriculum and hands-on training, we hope to contribute to the careers of advisors from underrepresented groups.”

The G2 Leadership Institute is the only management and leadership training program for financial advisors that marries a comprehensive curriculum with hands-on experience and cross-firm collaboration. Since its inception six years ago, the program has brought together 218 professionals from 126 firms. It has become the preferred training program for many of the top firms in the industry, who year over year have enrolled their future leaders in the institute. Graduates of the program have gone on to assume leadership positions throughout the industry, including firm president and C-level roles.

“Providing advisors from underrepresented communities with a path to leadership will not only help our industry, it will allow firms to tap into new opportunities, better serve their clients and broaden the positive impact they strive to have on their communities,” added Palaveev. “It will also create a generation of leaders whose advocacy will attract more diverse future advisors, changing the DNA of their firms and, ultimately, the makeup of the industry.”
